5 THINGS

to know about

SGUnited Skills Programme in Workplace Learning and User Experience

1 What will I get out of this course?

The workplace is a significant source and a natural site of learning and development for workers in their jobs. Constant changing business landscape requires workers to constantly and continuously deepen or broaden their skillsets to stay current and abreast of such advances. To keep up with this demand, organisations need to encourage a culture of learning and make the learning accessible to its workers. This cross-disciplinary programme is targeted at those in the learning and development space. The aim is to equip participants with skills to design and improve digital interfaces for learning, promote a culture of active and continuous learning through technology, to better design learning packages and material for digital delivery.
